

Today, leaders can show up in many different forms, from a CEO to a bank teller to an eleven-year-old. Leadership doesn't take age, education, or training into consideration. Anyone and everyone can influence and make an impact, which will ripple out into the world.

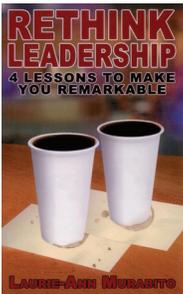

“Leadership is not what you do, it’s who you become.”

That's Laurie-Ann Murabito's motto and the core theme she shares with audiences.

With 20 years of healthcare, corporate, and entrepreneurial experience, she knows what it means to step out and make a lasting impact while touching the lives of those around you.

An award-winning speaker, Laurie-Ann's presentations are designed to champion change and growth on a personal and professional level. She has worked with numerous organizations to provide powerful trainings and workshops that engage and entertain while challenging attendees to embrace change. Her memorable content is presented with her signature no-nonsense, energetic style.

Laurie-Ann works with organizations that are dedicated to nurturing and strengthening future leaders within their ranks. These companies develop a culture of excellence by inspiring leadership at all levels, no matter what titles employees hold. She speaks regularly on fostering leadership, expecting and receiving peak performance, and building effective teams.

The book that started the movement. Laurie-Ann Murabito is the author of “Rethink Leadership: 4 Lessons to Make You Remarkable,” a modern-day parable about developing true inner leadership. Learn the four basic skills that all truly remarkable leaders have and practice every day, regardless of their age or title.
